Byers fire board ponders land purchase, overtime

by Kathy Smiley Staff Writer

BYERS — The Byers Fire Protection District will open negotiations to purchase property adjacent to the firehouse.

After discussion July 21, the district board pinned down its initial offer and conditions for the purchase, which will be conveyed via the district's attorney to the land-owning trust representative. The parcel is needed for the district's planned firehouse expansion project to extend the bay and add office space, a training and board room, and living quarters for staff.

The payroll budget for 2025 was reviewed and Chief Mike Disher noted that overtime costs are over budget because a paramedic position is open and volunteer coverage is hard to come by.

"I'm already $9,000 over, so my question for the board is, do you want us to cut overtime now and see if we can get volunteers to fill in, or do we want to proceed with (paying overtime)?" Disher asked.

Board chairman James Shelley noted that, if volunteers don't pick up shifts, the coverage would fall on the district's two chiefs.

"My concern is, if we stop overtime, it's going to burn out those you choose to fill those holes," he said. "While I don't [like going over budget] I don't

"That's a deal-breaker for me."

Stiles added that CORE stated their equipment standards are up to state and federal standards and that town code includes exemptions for outdoor safety lighting in public places, but Vittum still dissented while trustees Royce Pindell, Denice Smith, Steve Dambroski and Mayor Pro Tem Kevin Barden voted in favor. Mayor Whitney Oakley and Trustee Donna Sus were absent.

Even in voting in favor, Smith and Pindell recognized shortcomings in CORE's planned lighting fixtures but thought the benefit outweighed the concerns.

"I'd hate not to support this right now and sacrifice the safety along the trail," Pindell said. "But they are doing it up to their standards. It's also their poles."

In a reply to an e-mail from The I-70 Scout late last week, CORE countered town staff's assertions, saying "Safety is of paramount importance in the development of CORE's standards, yet we make effort to coordinate with local initiatives and community preference where possible. In this situation, CORE's standards are in alignment with the Dark Sky initiative. All CORE lighting fixtures for new construction will carry Dark Sky approved certification."

WATER VALVE PROGRAM UPDATE

Stiles announced that the town is starting to receive the first smattering of Pressure Reducing Valve (PRV) rebate requests and that, so far, many of the residents impacted are paying less than originally anticipated

Residents of all Bennett neighborhoods built out prior to 2020 (shaded red areas) are directly impacted by the town's Pressure Reducing Valve (PRV) program, which has been mandated because of the municipality's effort to move to a single pressure zone for water service and to assist in filling the town's water storage tanks to full capacity.

The exact number of rebates currently received was not released.

Stiles also mentioned that several of the bills in the $750 range were sub-

During the June board meeting, it was announced that the number of residences to be impacted by the PRV program was 882, meaning all areas of town developed prior to 2020 Centennial, Brothers Four, Cordella and Old Town north of the train tracks. New development in town and most homes built within the past several years are exempt from the PRV installation. Homes in the the town's newest subdivisions are not impacted.

Over the past 10 years, the town decommissioned the historic elevated water storage tank north of the train tracks and built a 500,000-gallon elevated water storage tank near town hall to increase water pressure; in addition, the town's water storage tanks are not able to fill to capacity. Efforts to move to a one-pressurezone system are expected to enhance efficiency and reliability and in an efofficials considered placing PRVs on their portion of the lines, but decided to pass the expense and complications on to homeowners of longstanding dwellings within town boundaries.

The deadline for PRV installation and the new single pressure zone is September of next year.

For additional program information, residents can email prv@bennett.co.us.

ANNEXATION ELIGIBILITY

During the second part of a threestep process, trustees unanimously approved a resolution confirming the annexation eligibility of a pair of proposed subdivisions on the west edge of town between the under-construction Muegge Farms development and Centennial.

Prairie Grass West is 82-plus acres and is located immediately south of Colfax Avenue and east of Harback equipment purchase.

Road, while the approximately 161acre Prairie Grass East is slated to be located east of Penrith Road and north of Muegge Farms.

The two properties are not yet anmined time frame.

Town staff said the developers for the Prairie Grass projects submitted its petition and map on June 10.

Developer representatives said that both proposed developments would be similar to Muegge Farms but that some light commercial business is also planned. A 2-acre site has already been set aside for the Bennett Fire Protection District in the northwest. Corner of the Prairie Grass East property.

OTHER BUSINESS

The board unanimously OK'd the 2024 audit.

During his presentation earlier in the evening, auditor James Rae recommended that the town seriously consider adding a full-time employee to the finance department, which would bump that staff roster to four.

Rae said that the amount of grants fort to reduce maintenance on the wa- the town has and will likely receive ter distribution system. Initially town in the future make an additional employee a worthwhile investment.

> "The biggest risk area is grants and they add an extra level of stress on staff," Rae said. "Plus the feds oversee them and there's a lot of extra paperwork."

The town is currently working through $12-15 million in grants.

Stiles said that a current staff member is getting extra training for "more extensive stuff," but that the board will likely see a request for another full-time employee in the next budget.

The board approved allowing up to $2,000 in startup cost assistance to Anytime Fitness, a new business coming to town.

Over the first six months of the business being in operation, the town will provide a 50% rebate of the 3% general sales tax collected, up to the $2,000 threshold. The rebate will commence on the date of the first qualifying

Adams Co. employees win nat'l awards for excellence in gov't communications Awards from the National Association of Government Communicators.

The award is a major recognition of excellence among public-sector communications professionals nationwide, according to a July 22 release.

Out of hundreds of entries from all levels of government agencies across the country, only 88 awards were home three third-place winners:

- Photography Portfolio, "Capturing a Community in Moments," Wes
- Internal Communications, "Giddy Up for Wellness," employee health campaign designed by Jason Lewis.
- Writing Portfolio, "Crafting Commissioner Voice," Nikki Welland-

"Our communications team is the voice behind the scenes, ensuring residents are informed, engaged, and connected. This national recognition confirms what we already know: Adams County is home to one of the best teams in the country," said Lynn Baca, chair of the Board of Adams County BRIGTHON - The Adams County Commissioners. "This is a win for evcommunications team earned three ery resident who depends on timely, national Blue Pencil & Gold Screen accurate and engaging information from their local government, because it shows our community members they can trust us to deliver.'

> The Blue Pencil & Gold Screen Awards recognize excellence in more than 30 categories, including writing, photography, social media, campaigns and internal communications.

These awards are a reflection of the granted, and Adams County brought innovation and commitment we see across every department," said County Manager Dionne Stroter. "Our communications team plays a vital role in making sure the work happening county-wide is visible, accessible, and relatable for all residents."

Two of the award-winning portfolios were submitted by employees who have been with the county for just one year, a testament to the energy that continues to elevate the entire department, according to a release.

"These awards are especially meaningful because it recognizes the heart behind what we do: telling the stories of our community and for our community clearly and creatively," said Communications Director Nikki Kim-

COMMERCE CITY - After six years of paw-some service, an 8-yearold Dutch Shepherd with the Adams County Sheriff's Office K-9 unit, was honored at a special retirement ceremony July 16.

K9 Tigger joined the unit in 2019 and quickly earned a reputation as one of the most dependable - and paws-itively determined - working dogs in the region. Over the course of his career, Tigger has been credited with 165 arrests, including 11 suspect apprehensions involving bites, and the detection and seizure of more than 2.8 kilograms of methamphetamine, 19.3 kilograms of cocaine, 334 grams of fentanyl, 12.3 grams of heroin, and 1.56 grams of ecstasy.

With a nose for justice and a bark backed by bravery, Tigger has played a vital role in countless investigations and high-risk operations, helping to protect the community and take dangerous drugs off the streets.

The retirement ceremony featured remarks from Sheriff Gene Claps and specialized canine teams trained in a presentation honoring Tigger's ca- narcotics detection, suspect apprereer. The guest of honor also celebrat- hension, and search and rescue opered his retirement with a well-earned ations.

from first grade, but his family moved out of state for two of his high school years. He was happy to be back in Strasburg for his senior year.

"My parents moved to California when I was a sophomore, and so I missed my sophomore and junior year in Strasburg and I went to school in southern California, but then I came back for my senior year, so that was pretty neat," he said.

Patricia Haller Bright joined the class her freshman year. Her family had a farm near Last Chance, and she attended three different oneroom schools in the area until eighth grade.

"My mother was a schoolteacher," Pat said. "I'm the oldest of the family, and she wanted me to be a teacher. The high school I would have attended - Woodrow - was not accredited, so they sent Bradley White. The classmates spoke about Lavaughn Cook Richter, who lives in Strasburg but was unable to attend the event because of medical issues. They also fondly spoke about classmates who have passed, including Carney Sloan, who died in a farming accident shortly after graduation.

A class history page in the 1955 annual lists the members of the class each year from first grade in 1943 until their senior year. Membership in the class fluctuated each year with six students in first and second grades up to 21 in their freshman year.

Janice noted that the polio epidemic in the 1950s affected the numbers.

"Polio was really rampant at the time, and I know two or three families moved from Kansas or Nebraska to be close to Denver for medical Carney Sloan's family moved to Strasburg when he was in fourth grade.

"I can't tell you how long, but he was out of school a long, long time with polio, but then he came back, and he graduated with us," Janice said.

close. The group was dubbed the Terrible Ten, although no one could (or school," Janice said. "The first time I would) say why.

"We were all go-getters," Pat said. "We all liked to be kind of daring, like when we went down to the creek and had a picnic.'

The girls enjoyed each other's company and found plenty to do together in Strasburg.

"We visited each other's homes and did different things like making taffy," Janice said. "We rode horseback a lot, and rode down to the creek and had bonfires, and some of the high school fellas would have a little rodeo there. And, of course, we never really went other places except right around here, and I was fortunate enough I could come to town."

Several topics that were discussed as the six classmates sat at a round table eating lunch follow.

THE EXPECTATIONS OF GIRLS IN THE 1950S

"Of course, the girls didn't have any sports to participate in," Janice said. "We had nothing. Nothing. We had pep club and we sat and watched. It was horrible.'

"Do you remember (in gym class) where we played basketball but could only go half court?" Dodi asked. "They thought we weren't strong enough to run the whole course!"

of solidarity.

"We only wore skirts or dresses to have enough money in our class trearemember wearing Bermuda shorts was when I went off to college as a freshman. Oh my gosh. My folks thought it was the end of the world. 'She's wearing pants!"

DYNAMICS BETWEEN THE BOYS, GIRLS

'We didn't have any couples pair off," someone noted. "Although Bruce eventually married Dodi's sister."

When asked if the boys formed alliances akin to the girls' "Terrible Ten," Bruce said no.

'Not really. Me and Carney Sloan pretty well hung out together. And then the two Bobs — Bob Hanlon and Bob Culp — kind of hung out. But the four of us were close, like on Senior Sneak, when we hung together because we had to, with 13 girls on that trip. Right?"

SENIOR SNEAK

"We went to Pueblo first," Bruce said. "We went to the steel mill, and I think we went to a museum or something. Then we went to Mesa Verde."

Carol reminded Bruce that they also toured the prison in Cañon City.

'Oh, yeah. They told us, 'This is where you're going if you don't change your ways," Bruce said.

in the whole course!" "We also went to Glenwood "Stupid rules," Bruce said, in a show Springs," Carol added.

That's right," Bruce said. "We didn't sury to stay at the Hot Springs Lodge, so everybody took a little bit of their own spending money and added to it so we could stay in that lodge right by the pool. Nice. We were there for two days and maybe two nights. That was the last stop before we came home."

The group didn't travel in a bus four adults drove their cars.

"Yeah, my mom took a car, and I think Janice's mom took a car," Bruce said, adding that a teacher and the principal also drove.

"We four boys rode in my in my mom's car," Bruce said.

"Yeah, for protection," Carol quipped.

"We didn't mingle with the girls when we were traveling," Bruce explained.

GETTING IN TROUBLE

When asked if they recall doing anything that got them in trouble, someone said.

"What's she talking about?" with feigned incredulity.

'We did a naughty thing on Halloween," Janice admitted. "Some of the town's houses had privies and kids from them." would go knock them down."

Janice was quick to add that she LIFE JOURNEYS AND LESSONS LEARNED didn't push any outhouses over.

"I stayed in the car," she said. "It was funny, one man moved his privy off the site so when the guys came at night, they fell in the hole."

Janice did participate in at least one occasion of naughtiness.

"We stole watermelons from someone's garden and had a watermelon feast," she said.

Carol recalled the group skipping a morning of school one day.

"I'm not certain, but I think I remember we were all in the back of a pickup truck," she said.

THROWING THE SENIORS A PROM

It was traditional for the junior class to organize the prom for the seniors, and the process was memorable for several classmates, who created an "ice castle" theme.

"We went out and collected tumbleweeds," Dodi said. "Someone's dad had a Quonset hut which we filled with the tumbleweeds and sprayed them white or silver to hang from the ceiling in the gym. We also cut out foam things to make ice. Bob changed the words to 'Vaya con Dios' and we sang that to them.'

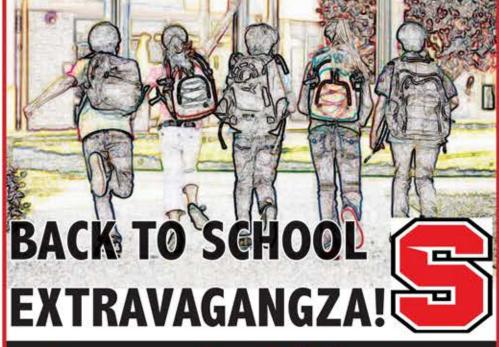

Joyce added that the group raised money for prom with a paper drive.

"You had to put old newspapers in bundles that you could sell by the pound," she said. "We worked together as a team and talked people into saving their Rocky Mountain News and Denver Post. We went all over, even in the country, to pick them up

Along with the reminiscences, the classmates openly shared personal stories - both happy and sad. The stories were heard without judgement but with empathy and acceptance.

Two sentences were heard numerous times: I'm so happy to be here," and "I'm so happy you're here."

After nearly nine decades of living, these folks know what is important.

Denver's new women's soccer team announces name, logo

by Arnie Stapleton AP Sports Writer

The expansion National Women's Soccer League team in Colorado set to start play next season will be called the Denver Summit.

The team announced its new name, colors and crest July 22.

The Summit name was the result of a fan survey that generated more than 50,000 responses, the team said.

The team's crest, meant to reflect the Colorado landscape, is a dark green image of mountains set in front of an reddish-orange and gold sunset.

"I think the process for the brand was very much rooted in just the ethos of this club, which is community first," team president Jen Millet said. "I think there's a real acknowledgement from this ownership group that community is at the center of what we're building and doing and how we will be successful."

The one hiccup in the process was was an Ultimate Frisbee team which already claimed the name Colorado Summit, but the Ultimate Frisbee Association agreed to rename the team.

The Denver Summit and the Boston Legacy join the 12-year-old NWSL next season, bringing the league to 16

Ella Mae Butts passed away peacefully at the age of 93 on July 28, 2025, in Colorado Springs.

Ella Mae was born September 28, 1931, on the family farm near Bennett, Colo., to Cyrus and Elia May (Neuschwanger) Peterson. She was the youngest of her seven siblings. As a child, she enjoyed riding bareback on a gentle horse named Nell and pretending that dandelion flowers were her little pet chicks. In high school, Ella Mae played the drums in the band.

After graduating, Ella Mae moved to Denver where she worked as the bookkeeper for the Meininger Art Supply store on 16th Street, and met her future husband Jim Butts, who was in the Army and stationed at the Rocky Mountain Arsenal. They enjoyed square dancing at the USO.

Ella Mae was active in her children's lives. She taught Sunday school, led Girl Scout and Cub Scout groups, and served as treasurer for the PTA. She frequently welcomed the neighborhood kids to join in to decorate holiday cookies and color Easter eggs. She sewed over 100 lap robes and donated them to Silver Key. During COVID, she made and donated masks using fancy old

Later Ella Mae was known for her painted rocks which she presented to just about everyone who she encountered. The latest volunteer activity she enjoyed was rocking babies in the infant rooms at Early Connections Learning Centers. She loved snuggling with them and singing them

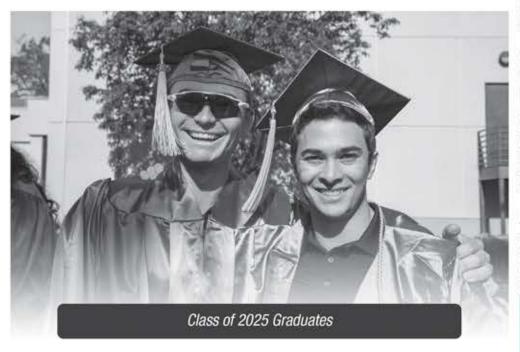

Ella Mae is survived by her husband of 67 years, James; her children, Janet (Ed) Knox, Jack (Amy Horne) Butts, and Janell (Mark) Wisehart; her grandson John; as well as many nieces, Ella Mae was preceded in death by her parents, Cyrus and Ella May Peterson; and her brothers Loyal, Orville, James, Elvin, and Cleo; and sisters Geneva Hoover, and Ester Krout.

Ella Mae will rest peacefully next to her parents and brother, Orville, at Mount View Cemetery, Bennett, Colo. A graveside gathering will be on held at 10 a.m., Aug. 23.

A celebration of life will be held at 1 p.m., Friday, Sept. 19, 2025, at MacKenzie Place, 1605 Elm Creek View, Colorado Springs, Colo., 80907.

In lieu of flowers, memorial contributions may be made in Ella Mae's name to Early Connections Learning Centers (www.earlyconnections.org).

The pride of the Union Pacific Railroad, Big Boy, rolls into Strasburg on its last visit in October 2024.

New transcontinental railroad?

UP, Norfolk Southern discuss merger, AP source says

by Josh Funk

AP Business Writer

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern are in merger talks to create the largest railroad that would connect the East and West Coasts in North America.

The merger discussions began during the first quarter of this year, according to a person familiar with the talks who isn't authorized to discuss them publicly. It would combine the largest and smallest of the country's six major freight railroads. Both railroads declined to comment.

Within the industry widespread debate is occurring over whether such a merger would be approved by the Surface Transportation Board even though those regulators approved the deal that created CPKC railroad two years ago with the Canadian Pacific's $31 billion acquisition of Kansas City Southern railroad.

That merger combined the two smallest major railroads in North America and left only six major freight railroads. But it was the first major rail merger approved in more than two decades.

The bar for railroad mergers in the United States was raised substantially at the start of the century after a disastrous combination of Union Pacific and Southern Pacific in 1996 that snarled rail traffic for an extended period, followed by the 1999 split of Conrail between Norfolk Southern and CSX, which created backups in the East.

competition and serve the public interest under the 2001 rules. The CPKC merger was not judged under those rules because Kansas City Southern had an exemption from them as the smallest major freight railroad at the Union Pacific CEO Jim Vena talked earlier this year about the potential benefits of such a merger because it would streamline deliveries all across the country by eliminating the delays that come along with one railroad handing shipments over to another. Plus it would simplify shipping for the companies that rely on railroads to deliver their raw materials and finished products.

But, in the past, some shippers have raised concerns about the consequences of even fewer options to ship their goods because the major railroads are already so powerful.

Some investors have long argued that the industry should eventually consolidate to two East-West railroads crossing the U.S. alongside the two railroads that already cross Canada. But skeptical regulators have taken a cautious approach. Any proposed deal would face a lengthy STB review. That board is currently evenly split between two Republicans and two Democrats with one seat open.

Citi Research analyst Ariel Rosa said in a research note that a major transcontinental railroad merger "would likely prove costly and time consuming, risking a years-long distraction to management, while facing significant resistance from regulators, politicians, employee unions, competitors, customers and other stakeholders.

Love in a Tide Pool

Venus was born of sea foam, riding a clamshell on the undulating pull of the ocean - a symbol of desire itself. As she drifts into Cancer's waters, love returns to its tide pool. The current softens and deepens, turning toward memory, meaning and belonging. 'Tis the season when tenderness becomes its own ecosystem. Settle into the places where beauty feels safe and soulful care will surface.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22). Don't be too quick to call out your strengths and be even more reticent to name your weaknesses. You are among the least qualified people to judge the matter. And besides, with a little encouragement, you can expand far past former limits.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22). You're in this spot for a reason. Maybe you're still growing into it — that's how it works. The ones who care most always wonder if they belong. That question doesn't hold you It keeps you awake, aware, rising.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23). You've outgrown a rule you used to live by. Maybe it got you here, but it won't take you farther. You're ready to move with more freedom, more trust in your own timing. The old map doesn't show what's next.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 21). Attention finds you - it always does. But the real gold is in where (SET ITAL) you (END ITAL) place your focus. Choose beauty. Choose aliveness. Choose the thing that makes you lean in. Choose what makes you laugh out loud.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21). Stay loose. Say the wild thing. Ask the better question. Let someone surprise you. This isn't a time for outlines or rehearsals. Ditch the polished prose for sparks. The best parts happen in the unscripted moments. CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19). You showed up for the shine and stayed for the sweat. What pulled you in isn't the same thing keeping you here, and that's the best part. The real reward has been found (SET ITAL) inside (END ITAL) the doing.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18). Your impatience is actually a good thing now because you won't wait for the perfect opening, you'll just make one. You'll say the thing, start the story, create appetites and desire where none existed.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20). There's a tiny detail that wants your attention, and once you give it, everything clicks. It's the loose thread, the half-finished thought, the text you meant to send. Clean it up, stitch it closed, and then watch how smooth things move.

ARIES (March 21-April 19). Feelings are real, but they don't run the show. You're choosing from a wider view - long-term goals, real needs, what actually matters. This is you showing up like a boss, doing what needs doing without getting tangled in passing moods.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20). Feeling at ease inside vourself leads to a better time with others. Words won't trip you up. You'll catch the meaning beneath them - the feeling, the intention - and that's where the real fun begins. GEMINI (May 21-June 21). People will ask things that poke at you. Stay wild. Stay private. There's no rule that says you must explain yourself. Mystery is a right. You decide how much to reveal. You decide what parts of you are made public. CANCER (June 22-July 22). You used to know how to do something, and though it's been a long while, you still do. It's not gone. It's waiting. If you're tired of going through the motions, try this: Don't go through them. Dance through them. Skip through them. Make them strange again.

TODAY'S BIRTHDAY (July 30). This year is filled with signs, symbols and soul-level connections. You'll speak your intentions softly and watch them come true with surprising swiftness. You'll receive favors just when needed, as though the universe planned it with your calendar in mind. More highlights: a signature look or phrase that becomes iconic, a fluke that turns lucrative, and a romantic plot twist you didn't see coming. Aries and Libra adore you. Your lucky numbers are: 1, 13, 20, 14 and 6.

Thriving desert oasis returns as Lake Powell shrinks

by Alex Hager

Seth Arens has all the adventurous swagger of Indiana Jones. His long hair is tied up in a bun, tucked neatly under a wide brimmed hat. His skin bears the leathery tan of someone who has spent the whole summer under the desert sun.

But, as Arens pushed his way through a tallerthan-your-head thicket of unforgiving dense grasses, he explained why he doesn't carry a machete, betraying his differences from the whip-cracking tomb raider.

"I guess, as an ecologist, I can't quite bring myself to just hack down vegetation," Arens said.

Arens is a scientist with Western Water Assessment and the Cooperative Institute for Research in Environmental Sciences, both headquartered at the University of Colorado at Boulder.

He has spent weeks traversing the smooth, twisting red rock narrows of Glen Canyon in search of his own kind of treasure: never-before-collected data about plants.

Glen Canyon is perhaps best known for the reservoir that fills it. Lake Powell, the nation's second-largest reservoir, has kept much of the canyon underwater since the 1960s and '70s. The 21st Century has changed that. Climate change and steady demand have brought its water levels to record lows, putting once-submerged reaches of the canyon above water for the first time in decades.

What happens next remains up in the air. Some environmental advocates want to see the reservoir drained so plants, animals and geologic features can return. Boaters and other recreationists want to maintain the status quo — keep storing water in Lake Powell and sustain a tourism site that brings in millions of visitors each year.

In the snaking side canyons that were once under Lake Powell, Arens is methodically counting plants root and which might be lost if the reservoir were to rise again.

"Nature has given us a second chance to reevaluate how we're going to manage this place," Arens said.

While the study is still underway, Arens said native species dominate the landscape alongside the area's creeks. The same kinds of plants that lived in Glen Canyon before Lake Powell have taken root at different sites over the course of multiple years. again — even after their habitats were drowned —

He is creating a record of which species are taking filled in with towering piles of sediment deposits, and then shown the light of day once more.

"It turns out nature is doing a pretty good job by itself," Arens said, "Of coming back and establishing thriving ecosystems."

'OLD ASSUMPTIONS' AND NEW POLICIES

The data produced by this study is going public SEE LAKE POWELL PAGE 16

during a pivotal time for the Colorado River and its major reservoirs.

Decisions made over the next two years will shape who gets how much water from the shrinking river, which supplies roughly 40 million people. Cities and farms from Wyoming to Mexico are all trying to make sure they get their fair shares, and environmental advocates are attempting to ensure the region's plants and animals aren't an afterthought.

The current guidelines for managing the river expire in 2026. Right now, policymakers are working on a set of replacements. Eric Balken, director of the nonprofit Glen Canyon Institute, wants those new rules to factor in the well-being of plants around Lake Powell.

"If the old assumption was that we can store water in Glen Canyon because there's nothing there, that as-sumption is wrong," he said. "There is a lot here. There is a serious ecological consequence to putting water in this reservoir, and we cannot ignore that anymore.'

Balken's group, which advocates for the draining of Lake Powell and storage of its water elsewhere, provided some funding for the plant study being conducted by Arens. Glen Canyon Institute hopes it will provide data that proves the value of the canyon's plant ecosystems to policymakers.

That's extra important, Balken said, because federal water managers aren't doing enough for Glen Canyon's plants right now.

The Bureau of Reclamation, which manages the West's reservoirs, outlined its current strategy for river management in an October 2023 document called the "Draft Supplemental Environmental Impact Statement." Balken called that document's assessment of Glen Canyon plants "demonstrably false."

In short, Reclamation describes an environment dominated by invasive plants that only stand to cause prob-

"When I read that," said Balken, sitting near a patch of native willow plants feet from Lake Powell's edge. "I just thought, 'Had these people even been to Glen Canyon?' This place is a vibrant, burgeoning ecosystem."

Reclamation's report mentions some native species that form "unique ecosystems within the desert," but appears to conclude that rising reservoir levels - which are partially the result of the agency's own management decisions — would ultimately be good for plant life around Lake Powell.

It highlights the presence of invasive plant species and says "any additional acreage of exposed shoreline around Lake Powell has the potential to be invaded by invasive plant species such as tamarisk and Russian Balken and Arens argue the opposite, pointing to early survey findings that include widespread native plant life in areas that have been exposed by declining reservoir levels.

Reclamation declined to be interviewed for this story, but a spokeswoman for the agency wrote in an e-mail to KUNC, "Reclamation's consideration of impacts to vegetation are primarily for resources downstream of Glen Canyon Dam that are affected by dam releases."

The spokeswoman wrote that "most of the releases, even on the annual time scale, have negligible effects on lake levels and vegetation," and pointed to inflows, such as annual snowmelt, as having a bigger impact on water levels in the reservoir than Reclamation's releases of water from Glen Canvon Dam.

Balken suspects that Reclamation lacks data about Glen Canyon's plants and hopes that the ongoing study will fill in those gaps and help shape management plans going forward.

The National Parks Service, which manages recreation on Lake Powell and gathers data about the surrounding environment, was not able to provide comment for this story.

'CHANCE FOR SURVIVAL'

While Arens' study hasn't produced any hard data yet, he is taking a mental tally of plants every time he trudges through the lush, winding creek beds that channel spring-fed streams into Lake Powell.

These riverside ecosystems were shaped by their years spent underneath the reservoir, and little signs of that reality are everywhere.

Standing in the baking desert sun, Arens poked at a digital map on his phone screen while trying to find his next research site, and the map showed that he was standing underwater. Much of the canyon is lined with banks of sediment, sometimes more than a dozen feet tall, that were left behind by the still waters of Lake Powell. Those banks now provide heaps of soil for the roots of native plants.

Now that some of those areas have been left to grow for more than two decades, in some cases, they abound with life.

In one canyon, frogs and toads hop along the clear trickle just downstream of a beaver pond while birds flit in and out of tall, shady cottonwoods. In another, ferns sprout from crevices where water seeps onto a damp rock wall.

It's a veritable oasis in the desert the kind of cool, spring-fed Eden that populated the heat-induced daydreams of thirsty cowboys traversing the expanses of the Old West.

Katie Woodward, Arens' research assistant, is finding inspiration in these canyons, too.

"It's very obvious that nature can take care of its own and turn a highly disturbed landscape, a landscape that was disturbed because of the follies of man, and change that into something that is diverse and productive," she said. "I would have never believed how possible that was until I came down here.'

The researchers hope their findings about that recovering landscape end up in front of policymakers, whose decisions could shape the future of Glen Canyon's native ecosystems.

"As Glen Canyon resurfaces, there's an incredible moment for species, that are feeling the pressures of both human-induced and naturally driven change on water resources in riparian areas in the West, to have a chance for survival in a future that feels really unknown and kind of scary," Woodward said.

Some of those unknowns might get settled soon, as the next rules for Colorado River management are likely to include new plans for storing water in Lake Powell. State water negotiators have projected optimism that policy meetings will result in a new agreement for water management before the 2026 deadline.

PUBLIC NOTICE

Byers School District will provide breakfast and lunch at no cost for all students.

The district is pleased to announce its participation in the Community Eligibility Provision. Byers School will offer no-cost breakfast and lunch to all students during the 2025-26 school year. Research shows students who are not hungry perform better in school. By providing breakfast and lunch to all students at no cost, we better support their learning.

These breakfasts and lunches follow U.S. Department of Agriculture guidelines for healthy school meals. Families can feel secure knowing the meals they eat at school meet rigorous federal and state nutrition standards. School cafeterias always offer fruits, vegetables, whole grains, lean protein and low-fat or fat free milk. School meals also meet limits on calories, sodium and unhealthy fats.

We encourage all families to choose school meals. This increases funding for our schools and creates a strong school community around mealtimes. It also saves time and money, which families can use for what's most important to them.

Indian-Spiced Pork Burgers

by Christopher Kimball

Christopher Kimball's Milk Street

These flavor-packed burgers are a spin on a spiced pork sausage from Goa in southern India, based on the garlicky, European-style chouriço introduced by Portuguese settlers. To combat the humidity of the region and prolong the shelf life of the sausage, the meat is heavily salted and flavored with a mixture of spices and tangy vinegar.

Goan sausage is ubiquitous in southern India, where you can find it sold at street food carts and high-end restaurants alike, sometimes baked into a bun or minced and stuffed between layers of fried naan.

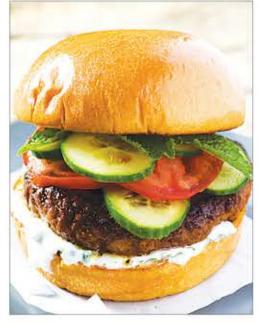

In this recipe from our cookbook " Milk Street 365: The All-Purpose Cookbook for Every Day of the Year," we take inspiration from those burger-like sandwiches, using a combination of grated garlic, garam masala, cumin, paprika and cayenne to give the all-pork patties deep, complex flavor and a rusty hue. Grating the garlic ensures it melts into the meat without any distracting bits. Instead of naan, we use classic hamburger buns.

Egg and panko bread crumbs help the patties keep their shape. Don't undermix the pork mixture; be sure to combine it well so the breadcrumbs and seasonings are evenly distributed.

These burgers are especially delicious topped with yogurt, torn fresh mint leaves and thin slices of cucumber or tomato

- ¾3 cup panko breadcrumbs
- ¼ cup plain whole-milk yogurt, plus more to serve
- 5 teaspoons garam masala
- 5 teaspoons sweet paprika
- · 1 tablespoon ground cumin ½ teaspoon cayenne pepper
- 2 large egg yolks
- · 2 medium garlic cloves, finely

- · Kosher salt and ground black pep-
- · 1 pound ground pork
- · 2 tablespoons grapeseed or other neutral oil
- · 4 hamburger buns, toasted

DIRECTIONS

In a large bowl, combine the panko, yogurt, garam masala, paprika, cumin, cayenne, egg yolks, garlic, 3/4 teaspoon salt, 1/2 teaspoon pepper and 1/4 cup water. Using a fork, mash the mixture into a smooth paste. Add the pork and mix with until evenly combined. Form into 4 patties, each about 4 inches in diameter, place on a large plate and refrigerate for 15 minutes.

In a 12-inch nonstick skillet over medium, heat the oil until barely smoking. Add the burgers and cook until well browned, 7 to 8 minutes. Flip, reduce to medium-low and continue to cook until the patties are well browned on the second sides and the centers reach 160°F, another 5 to 7 minutes. Transfer to a clean plate, tent with foil and let rest for 5 minutes. Serve on the buns with additional yogurt on the side.

Above, two occupants of a car that crashed heading eastbound on I-70 near the 310 Strasburg exit on July 7 received serious but non life-threatening injuries, according to the Colorado State Patrol. State troopers and Strasburg Fire Department personnel were dispatched to the scene at approximately 2:15 p.m. and discoverd the vehicle down a ravine on the south side of the interstate with serious damage.

Also in July, a single-vehicle rollover occurred around East Quincy Avenue and South Brick Center Road (County Road 129) southwest of Bennett. The State Patrol and Bennett-Watkins Fire Rescue were dispatched near the intersection about 7:15 a.m. and one occupant was transported to the hospital. The southbound lane of CR 129 and the eastbound lane on Quincy was blocked until almost 8 a.m.

Last week saw grain bins and outdoor collection piles, including the most eastern pit at Cargill in Byers (pictured above), fill up quickly as the 2025 I-70 Corridor wheat harvest quickly progressed to about 90% complete. Statewide, the amount off remaining wheat to be harvested was estimated at 10% or less by the end of this week.

Wheat harvest nears finish line

Entering this week, Colorado wheat industry projections indicated that the I-70 Corridor wheat harvest was down to single-digit percentage points for what still needed to be combined.

Adams and Arapahoe counties are about 90% complete," said Colorado Wheat's July 24 harvest progress report. "The average test weight is around 60 pounds per bushel, and the average protein is around 11.5%."

At the end of the week, neighboring areas were reporting:

- Lincoln County: Harvest ws expected to wrap up last week. Yields have been wide-ranging between 20-55 bushels per acre. Average test weight is 60 pounds per bushel and the average protein is 12%.
- Washington, Morgan, and Logan but 10% ahead of t counties: Also about 90% comprevious five years.

plete with yields between 35-65 bushels per acre, average proten of 12%, 60 pounds-per bushel test weights.

- Yuma, Phillips, and Sedgwick counties: About 85% complete with 12% protein, average test weight around 60 pounds per bushel, and average protein at 12%.
- Western Weld and Eastern Larimer counties: Because of recent heavy rainfall, harvest was delayed until the middle week of July and is behind other areas of the state; however, test weights are averaging 61.5 pounds per bushel, and the average protein is 12.5%.

U.S. Department of Agriculture statistics last week showed Colorado wheat harvest was 81% complete, about 7% behind last year at this time but 10% ahead of the average for the previous five years.
